Important note - send us the 'accepted manuscript' of your article and not the publisher formatted PDF – as we are more likely to be able to make this version publically available. The 'accepted manuscript' is the final document that you create - as accepted for publication and incorporating any changes following refereeing and editing - but without any of the publishers' formatting, pagination, layout etc.

Your deposit assistant(s) will:

- check publisher's policy to determine if deposit of material into an institutional repository is allowed
- request permission to deposit the work from the publisher if no policy or agreement terms exist
- process the document, incl. conversion to PDF where necessary, OCR, etc.
- prepend a cover sheet with full citation information when uploading an accepted manuscript
- upload your publication to your departmental collection in TSpace
- make your publication available either immediately or after an embargo period in accordance with publisher's policy
